Colposcopy instrumental in identifying cervical cancer at early stage

100 doctors trained at CME, organized by AIIMS-R and ROGS

Central Chronicle News

Raipur, Jul 11: To provide hands-on training to identify cervical cancer early on with the help of Colposcopy, the All India Institute of Medical Sciences conducted a CME 'SSNPP CME Cum Live Colposcopy Workshop'. Experts said that with new technology, abnormal pap results, the presence of human papillomavirus (HPV), or unexplained bleeding and similar problems can be identified in married women, resulting in early treatment.

Department of Obstetrics and Gynaecology with Raipur Obs and Gyne Society organized a CME 'Swasthya Sunder Nari, Preventing the Preventable'. Prof. (Dr.) Nitin M. Nagarkar, Director, in his inaugural speech, congratulated the organizers for conducting a relevant CME on Colposcopy. AIIMS is instrumental in taking the lead role whenever new technology is available for patients. We must continue to train new medical practitioners under such workshops. Colposcopy can help identify cervical cancer. Given the increased number of cervical cancer patients, he said we must use it routinely to identify it at an early stage.

Prof. Sarita Agrawal, Dean (Research) and organizing Chairperson of the CME, informed that the department is receiving around 45 patients per day in OPD with abnormal cells in the cervix which need VIA or Colposcopy. 'As per protocol, we are screening all married women above 25 with suspected cervical cancer. If there are any abnormal cells found, we usually conduct a Colposcopy. Almost 15 patients every day have to undergo Colposcopy. It helped to prevent cervical cancer and used to start early treatment, she said. She further explained different research work at the department and the initiative was taken with FOGSI.

Dr. Meera Baghel, CMHO, Raipur suggested that doctors at the CHC level can be trained with Colposcopy under a similar training program. During the CME, Dr. Priya Ganesh Kumar, Chairperson, of the Gyne oncology Committee demonstrated a live demonstration of the Colposcopy. Dr. Priya is instrumental in conducting such a training program at the national level. Around 100 doctors participated in the CME. Dr. Tabbassum Datta and Dr. Monika Pathak thank AIIMS for providing hands-on training to doctors. Dr. Pushpawati and Dr. Nilaj Bagde also participated in the CME.
